

Dear Subscribers,

In a last minute gesture of goodwill, the amazing, fantastic trio known as Beatlegras has offered to travel to Linden's Music City Texas Theater on January 23 in order to make "the show go on," in the wake of Hal Ketchum's inability to perform that night.

They have gone even one step further and produced a short video announcing their appearance at MCT. Please view it at the following link:

In the past few years, Beatlegras has graced the MCT stage with two stellar performances which induced standing ovations from very thrilled audiences. This show is a "must see" for Beatle fans and Bluegrass fans alike ... actually, anyone who loves great music. With incomparable musicianship and their unique way of adapting your favorite Beatles' classic tunes to their own incredible style, these gentlemen will surely leave you with a smile on your face and a feeling that you've seen something "entirely different."

As an added bonus, Jubal Lee Young, who was scheduled to open the show for Hal, will still be here to supply his own flavor of fantastic songwriting and story-telling abilities, perpetuating the family legacy which his father, Steve Young, writer of The Eagles' "Seven Bridges Road" has created.

The best news is, we have lowered the ticket donation price to $20.00 for this show. This is a bargain by anybody's standards for the quality of performances that you've grown to expect at the Music City Texas Theater. It is the hope of MCT to make this evening of great music more affordable to all who are looking for a spectacular night of entertainment.

To learn more about Beatlegras and Jubal Lee Young, you may go to the following appropriate links: <http://www.beatlegras.com/> and <http://www.juballeeyoung.com/>.

For those of you who may have already purchased tickets for the Hal Ketchum show, you may contact the theater for a full refund. However, I recommend that you come on to the show and let us refund you the difference in the ticket price. I believe that you will be far from disappointed with the performance we have lined up for you.

Show time will remain at 7:30 PM. Doors will open at 6:00 PM and our concession stand will be open for food and refreshments.

You may reach our staff at 903-756-9934 weekdays from 10:00 AM - 3:00 PM to make arrangements for advance tickets or to have any questions answered regarding the show.

We hope to see you there!

Sincerely,

Richard Bowden
